Should the Payee Pay?

Frederick Wilmot-Smith

Abstract

This paper examines a topic on which there is almost unified convergence within Western legal systems: the recipient of a mistaken payment must, other things being equal, pay the money back. It argues that we have no good justification of this instance of liability.